

Church and Religious News

Committees of Harlem and New York Presbyterian churches are meeting to consider consolidation. One is located on Mount Morris Park West, and is without a pastor, and the other is at Seventh avenue and 125th street, and has a new pastor, the Rev. G. W. Arms, Jr., lately come from Colorado. It is assumed by the committees, it was said yesterday, that Mr. Arms would become pastor of both congregations, but which property is to be given up is undetermined. Both committees are tenacious on the point of retaining their respective properties. The Harlem church, in 120th street, near Fifth avenue, with which talk of consolidation has been had, is to retain its present plans.

Presbyterian support and extension have just had division of the Kennedy and other extension funds, and many new plans are in prospect. A most important project is the enlarging of the Bohemian project on the upper East Side. The sum of $25,000 has been granted toward a new parish building at First avenue and 5th street, to cost $40,000. The people have given $10,000. Institutional work of many kinds among Bohemians, long successful, is to be pushed.

Bethany Church, in the lower Bronx, has been granted $10,000 with which to alter and improve its parish building. Mount Washington Church, at Dyckman street and Broadway, in the Inwood district, receives $15,000 for a wholly new parish building. Woodlawn Heights Church is to be dedicated in April, and University Heights Church in May. A service celebrating freedom from debt by Fort Washington Church is to be held next Tuesday evening. The West End Church's new building, costing $50,000, is to be opened early next month, and $25,000 has been awarded to eighteen Presbyterian churches in Manhattan and The Bronx toward current expenses.

"The Protestant situation in Harlem needs a get-together policy," said a trustee of one of the churches there yesterday. "Not a mere union of two Presbyterian congregations. Changes in population and in city conditions make churches of the old type impracticable. I favor unity of action and the creation of a great social, recreative and spiritual center in the heart of Harlem, not to do a charitable or institutional work, such as is done in Manhattan on the East Side, but to meet the wants of the vast middle class. Public school buildings are to be made social centers, which is well; but churches must also be made such centers. They may not abandon strictly religious work, but they must add the other work. Committees of the two Presbyterian churches in Harlem stand ready, I think, to do their part in this common Harlem proposition."

It will be "go to church week" for St. Paul's Methodist Episcopal Church from March 22 to 29, inclusive. This month marks the seventy-ninth anniversary of the dedication of the church. It was then located in Mulberry street and called the Second Wesleyan Chapel. Services will be held as follows: To-morrow, 11 a. m., anniversary sermon by the pastor, the Rev. Dr. Charles L. Goodell; 8 p. m., preaching by Dr. G. A. Johnston Ross; Tuesday, laymen's meeting in charge of the official board, followed by social recreation; Wednesday, preaching by the pastor; Thursday, preaching by the Rev. F. Ernest Johnson; Friday, preaching by the Rev. Dr. C. L. Mead, and Sunday, 11 a. m., preaching by Dr. George P. Eckman; 8 p. m., preaching by the pastor.

SOCIETY ATTENDS

SILO'S ART SALE

Mrs. Burke Roche Gives $460 for "Children of France," a Flemish Tapestry.

The second session of the sale of period tapestries and other art objects at Silo's Fifth avenue art galleries yesterday attracted, besides the regular collectors, many persons well known in society. They included Mrs. John Jacob Astor, Mrs. H. Van der Horst, Mrs. Charles McManus, Mrs. E. Herzog, Mrs. Thomas Manson, G. M. Allen, W. W. Walker and M. Mettler. Mrs. Burke Roche gave the highest price of the day—$460 for "The Children of France"—a sunny-toned Flemish verdure tapestry panel in rich tones of amber, blue and green.

Edson Bradley bought two old Italian Renaissance tapestry arm chairs for $430, and an antique Rakka rug with seven handles for $150.

J. E. Stevens gave $45 for a rare sixteenth century Spanish tapestry panel, and $75 for an early Renaissance verdure tapestry panel.

James Elverson, of Philadelphia, paid $300 for a replica of the white marble orolu and Wedgwood Louis XVI clock by Falconet, which is in the Royal Palace at Madrid, and Mrs. Paul D. Mills, also of Philadelphia, gave $600 for a pair of French tapestry chairs with Pavot floral device. The session's receipts were $16,714, making a total of $21,124. At this afternoon's closing session of the sale Mr. Silo will offer a suite of Flemish tapestries; also the historic Napoleon vase and painted and framed Byzantine panel of saints in canonical vestments.

ANTIQUE VASE LEADS LIST

"Henry" Pays $1,500 for It at Porcelain Sale.

There was some brisk bidding at the second session of the sale of antique oriental porcelains at the American Art Galleries yesterday, the 150 specimens of one color and decorated vases, bowls and jades bringing $11,325, making the total to date $24,440.

A famille verte tall vase of the Kang-hai period, in the form of a graceful beaker brought in $1,000, the highest price of the afternoon. The buyer's name was given as "Henry." The vase, which is 25½ inches high, is of sonorous porcelain of clear tones with an elaborate decoration in enamel colors of the famille verte and gilding. That on the body pictures the eight famous steeds of the Emperor Muh Yang, who succeeded to the throne 1001 B. C., which took him in his chariot wherever he went, including a visit to the realm of Hsi Wang Mu in the Kun-lun Mountains. One of the horses carries a rider. Under the foot of the vase is the six character mark of the reign.

The next best price, $400, was paid by Robert Samuels for a d'Arques-Kang-hai club-shaped vase in the form of a cylinder. It is decorated with a group of Arhats in black, green and yellow enamel. For a Chien-lung decorated club-shaped vase, J. Franklin gave $250, and Kaldenberg & Co. paid $200 for a pair of jade bowls with covers. The sale ends with this afternoon's session.

Good Prices at Almone Sale.

An antique oak Georgian table, carved and finished in color and gold, brought $300, the top price, yesterday at the fourth session of the Almone sale, at the Anderson Galleries. It was bought by Austin Gibbons. J. Menges gave $200 for an antique oak Jacobean sideboard, purchased originally from an old homestead in Wales. It has six moulded drawers with wood pulls and brass escutcheons.

A star-shaped mirror, finished in powdered gold, went to H. W. Du Puy for $125, and S. Rose paid $100 for an antique iron Etruscan vase with leather seat and armrests—a museum piece. The sale will close this afternoon.

Convence at Columbia April 2.

The annual convention of the Inter-collegiate Civic League is to be held at Columbia University on April 2 and 3. The Associated Civic Clubs will have the luncheon at Columbia on April 2, and the afternoon will hold the annual business session in Earl Hall.

In the evening the students will dine at the City Club and will leave on a midnight train for Washington. They will call to see President Wilson at 2
